University of Minas Gerais The University of Minas Gerais (, UFMG) is a public research university and a university-level educational institution in Brazil. It is located in Belo Horizonte, Minas Gerais. Founded in 1945, it is the oldest private, non-state university in Brazil. History It was founded in 1945 by the Minas Gerais chapter of the Brazilian Catholic Apostolic Union (ACB) for the education of Catholic laymen. The first campus, which is called Pontificia, is located in the São Francisco neighborhood. The original campus also included the Faculdade de Direito de Minas, founded in 1946, which was the first law school in Brazil. In 1954 the Law School was relocated to the San João neighborhood, in the suburbs of Belo Horizonte, also due to its strategic position for the city. After almost a decade in San João, the law school was moved back to the downtown area. In the 1960s the State University of Minas Gerais was founded, making UFMG the only university in Minas Gerais and one of the two private universities in the state. In the 1970s the University expanded the number of programs offered and the number of its students and teachers. In the 1980s, the Faculty of Sciences and Technology was founded, with the Computer Engineering School being the first of its kind in the state. Also in the 1980 82157476af
